New Peoples Bank Welcomes Carol Robinson as Agricultural Commercial Banker

Honaker, Virginia - New Peoples Bank is pleased to announce that Carol Robinson has joined the bank as an Agricultural Commercial Banker, bringing more than three decades of banking and agricultural finance experience to the organization.

Robinson has dedicated her career to helping farmers, agricultural businesses, and rural communities achieve their financial goals. Her extensive experience working with agricultural producers and rural businesses has helped countless customers secure financing solutions tailored to their unique needs.

"We are excited to welcome Carol to the New Peoples Bank team," said Mike Ratliff, EVP & Chief Banking Officer. "Her deep understanding of agricultural lending, strong ties to the communities we serve, and commitment to building lasting customer relationships make her an outstanding addition to our organization. Carol's experience will further strengthen our ability to support local farmers, agribusinesses, and rural communities."

A graduate of King University with a Bachelor of Business Administration degree, Robinson is passionate about serving the agricultural community and helping customers navigate opportunities for growth and success.

"As a community bank with strong roots in the region, New Peoples Bank understands the importance of agriculture to our local economy," said Robinson. "I look forward to working with our farmers and agricultural businesses and helping them achieve their financial goals."

New Peoples Bank remains committed to providing personalized financial solutions and local decision-making that support the individuals, families, businesses, and agricultural operations that contribute to the success of the communities it serves.
